HAPPY BIRTHDAY
& MANY YEARS:Billy by Mom, Dad, Michelle, Pat
& AlisonFeast Day of Simeon the Outpourer of Myrrh – February 13th

Born Stevan Nemanja, Simeon became a great ruler of the Serbian people and the creator of an independent Serbian government. In the beginning, he was dependent upon Greece as the leader of the Serbian people. Later he was able to shake off this dependence and become completely autonomous. He was a defender of Orthodoxy and fought against heresy in the church. He was first baptized in the Latin Church but later became a member of the Orthodox Church. When he had strengthened the state and the Orthodox Church within the state he then, following the example of his son, Sava, received the monastic habit at the monastery of Studenica in 1195 and was given the name Simeon. His wife, Anna also received the monastic habit and the name Anastasia. After two years' monasticism at Studenica, Simeon went to the Holy Mountain and stayed at the monastery of Vatopedi with Sava. Father and son spent days and nights in prayer. They built six chapels on the Holy Mountain. They bought the ruins of Hilandar and built a beautiful monastery in which Simeon lived only eight months before his death.

Simeon was a model example of meekness, humility, goodness and prayer. On February 12th, St. Simeon told Sava to dress him in his burial habit, spread rushes for him on the ground, put a stone for his head and thus lay him there. Then he called together all the monks and asked for their forgiveness. At dawn on the 13th while the monks were singing the morning office in the church, Simeon's face lit up once more and he gave his soul to God with these words: "Let everything that hath breath praise the Lord." His relics have, through the ages, given off a healing myrrh.
